Hike In Gas Tax?

$52 Million In New Taxes Needed For State Roads

HARRISBURG (AP) — State Highway Secretary Park H. Martin Tuesday said his department will need a minimum of $52 million in new taxes this year for its construction program.

Martin emphasized that the $52 million figure was a minimum and said the actual amount requested may be higher than that. He said the actual legislative request would come from Gov. David L. Lawrence's office.

The Lawrence Administration has refused to confirm or deny published reports that it will ask the lawmakers for a two-cent increase in the state's gas tax.

The gasoline tax now is five cents per gallon. A two-cent increase would yield close to $70 million.

The printed reports immediately drew criticism from W. F. Richardson, executive secretary of the Associated Petroleum Industries of Pennsylvania.

Richardson said the proposed two-cent increase would give Pennsylvania a tax rate equal to the highest in the nation.

He called gasoline "the most heavily taxed useful item on the family shopping list" and contended state motorists already are paying "half and plenty in special automotive taxes, both state and federal."

Request Was Killed

Lawrence asked the 1969 legislature for a one-cent raise in the gasoline tax but the request was killed in the Republican-controlled Senate. Democrats control both houses this year.

Lawrence has evaded questions about his plans regarding the gas tax. His office has said he would have no comment before he makes his fiscal requests to the legislature next Monday.

C. E. Pugh, general manager of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation (AAA), also commented on the reported increase proposal.

He said 100 per cent of any new highway use levies should be specifically earmarked for use by the department. This, he said, might reduce the amount of additional taxes required.

Distress Bill By Van Zandt Given To JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.) said he has asked President-elect John F. Kennedy to consider a new plan for aid to distressed areas.

Van Zandt said he made the request in a letter to Kennedy outlining his program. He said it differs markedly from other bills he has submitted in previous sessions of Congress.

Van Zandt said his new bill would provide a program under which states would match federal funds in a revolving loan fund to aid industry in entering chronically depressed areas.

He said the program would cost the federal government less in the long run than other area redevelopment bills. In addition, he said his measure would provide a stimulus for states to get busy on the problem.

In an interview, Van Zandt emphasized that he will go along with any distressed areas bill that is agreed upon. But he thinks his own plan is better.

Democrats for the most part are backing the latest version of the old Flood-Douglas proposal, twice vetoed by President Eisenhower. This year's version would provide $389.5 million in federal aid.

Such a bill has been co-sponsored in the Senate by Sens. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) and Joseph S. Clark (D., Pa.), and a number of Pennsylvanians have introduced a similar bill in the House.

However, Sen. Hugh Scott (R., Pa.), and two Pennsylvania House Republicans, Reps. J. Irving Whalley and Herman T. Schneebeli, have introduced bills calling for $214 million in aid.

Georgia University Integrated

175 Years Of Segregation Comes To End

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—A Negro boy and girl registered at the University of Georgia Tuesday, ending 175 years of segregation, after the state carried its case all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court and lost.

Charlayne A. Hunter, 18, and Hamilton E. Holmes, 19, paid their tuition fees and prepared for their first classes Wednesday after a federal judge restrained the state from closing the university and the Supreme Court refused to grant a delay in the integration order.

They completed their registration three hours after Federal Dist. Judge William A. Bootle granted a temporary injunction at Macon, Ga., restraining Gov. Ernest Vandiver from cutting off funds under a state law and closing the school where the governor obtained his law degree.

The state received another telling blow late Tuesday afternoon when the U. S. Supreme Court unanimously refused to delay the admittance of the Negroes.

At Athens, Miss Hunter was assigned a room in Center Myers Hall under a university rule requiring freshmen women to live on campus.

A number of white girls left the dormitory in tears and walked around the building, weeping. One packed her suitcase and set it out on the sidewalk and another was seen carrying armloads of clothing from the dormitory. The house mother locked the doors and would not permit newsmen to enter.

At Athens, Miss Hunter was assigned a room in Center Myers Hall under a university rule requiring freshmen women to live on campus.

There was no fanfare as the Negroes officially became students. Some 500 of the nearly 7,500 white boys and girls in attendance at Georgia stood quietly outside the treasurer's office as the fees were paid.

Bootle, 58, who precipitated near pandemonium in state political circles last Friday by ordering desegregation, enjoined both the governor and State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. from interfering with operation of the university.

The litigation arose out of the attempt of two Negroes to enter the university. They completed their registration at the school Tuesday after Judge Bootle granted a temporary injunction barring Georgia's governor from cutting off funds for the school.

Keystone Route Contract Award Okayed By State

HARRISBURG (AP)—An estimated $446,000 contract for final design of a section of the Keystone Shortway in Columbia and Luzerne counties was awarded Tuesday by the State Highways Department.

The department retained Michael Baker Jr. Inc., Rochester, Pa., to prepare construction drawings for the 14-mile section of the east-west superhighway across the state from Sharon to Stroudsburg.

The section extends between Millville, Columbia County, and an interchange with State Route 29 in Luzerne County. The firm was given 12 months to complete the work.

The department reached agreements last week for the design of two other sections of the Anthracite Expressway, a Scranton-Harrisburg road, in Luzerne. The area these two contracts covered includes 9.6 miles in the Nesqueam Pass-Lake Nuangola section.

The compact stems from work done by INCODEL and the Delaware Basin Survey Coordinating Committee set up after the 1955 flood.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Dag Hammarskjöld is cutting short his visit to Africa in order to attend Security Council sessions on the Congo. His office announced Tuesday the secretary-general will return home Friday.

He went to Africa a week ago, and had planned to go to the Middle East.

Kennedy Gets Welfare And Space Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy, on a schedule crisscrossed with conferences and air flights, received Tuesday two more task force reports—on the old problem of public welfare and the new problem of space.

And he announced several appointments, including Henry H. Fowler as undersecretary of the Treasury. Fowler is a former director of defense mobilization.

The welfare report, made public in New York, proposed the expansion of several welfare programs and supported Kennedy's plan for medical care of the aged under Social Security.

The space report, handed to Kennedy at the Capitol, was not made public.

Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, said there had been no hitch or differences in the report. Release was delayed, he said, so some classified information could be taken out.

Chairman Jerome B. Weisner and his task force on space gave the report to Kennedy at a conference in the office of Vice President-elect Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson, who will head the National Advisory Council on Space, Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., new chairman of the Senate Space Committee, and Rep. Overton Brooks, D-La., chairman of the House Space Committee, also attended the session.

After the conference, Salinger read a statement by Kennedy which said the task force had "prepared a highly informative working paper covering many aspects of this critically important field, and their work and recommendations, along with further material, will be useful to Vice President-elect Johnson and me in shaping our national space program."

Kennedy then headed into the office of Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee.

Anderson told a newsmen they discussed Project Rover, the research program on using nuclear engines in rockets.

Before the session on space, Kennedy conferred for more than an hour with Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson on America's balance of payments problem.

Kennedy then met with Douglas Dillon, the incoming secretary of the Treasury, and Fowler. Dillon said they discussed the general administrative setup of the department.

On the flight from New York to Washington, Kennedy was accompanied by George F. Kennan, former ambassador to the Soviet Union. Kennedy said they did not discuss a job for Kennan in the administration.

Good Morning!

It's time enough to say it when you know it to be true.

Deficit Is Noted

MONROE COUNTY YMCA is considering the possibility of sponsoring a sportsmen's show in March or April and turning over the proceeds to the Community Chest.

Directors of the YMCA voted last night to contact the Community Chest board to see if such a project should be undertaken. An early decision is necessary, it was pointed out, because of the detailed work involved in arranging for the show.

Short Of Goal

During last night's discussion, the 'Y' directors noted that the recent Chest campaign fell short of its goal by a considerable amount. All member agencies, among them the YMCA, will receive reduced allocations as a result.

It was with the thought of making up part or all of the deficit that prompted the YMCA to consider the sportsmen's show idea.

Thomas Kistler, president, named Joseph Small, Alex Ben-singer, Arthur Troegner and Richard Frantz as a committee to plan the show, subject to the Chest's approval.

Ex-Gov. Fine Indicted For Income Tax Evasion

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP)—A federal grand jury Tuesday indicted former Gov. John S. Fine, 61, for income tax evasion.

A three count indictment against the onetime Republican leader also named his brother-in-law, Donald P. Morgan. Each was charged with evasion for the years 1955, 1956 and 1957. The total alleged to have been evaded was $45,554.

The allegations cover a period after Fine, 100th governor of the state, left office. He served from 1951 to January, 1955. In Pennsylvania, a governor cannot succeed himself.

Since leaving office his power as a political leader has reduced to where he no longer controls his own Luzerne County Republican organization.

Prepared Returns

There was no immediate comment from Fine or Morgan, who lives in Dallas, R. D., Luzerne County. Fine, now practicing law, lives at Loyalsville, near Harvey's Lake.

Morgan was believed to be an accountant and to have helped Fine in preparing returns for the three years.

The first count of the indictment says that in 1955 Fine reported income of $24,492 when the figure should have been $45,261.35. It says Fine paid income taxes of $8,428.67 and should have paid $20,446.01.

The second count, for 1956, says he reported income of $44,602.44, and paid taxes of $20,654.31. The figures, the indictment says, should have been $73,712.07 and $39,535.03.

The third count lists income of $35,994.08 reported on which Fine paid a tax of $14,515.44. The correct figures, it was charged, should have been $37,264.64 and $28,573.94.

The indictment was returned to Chief Judge John W. Murphy in Middle Pennsylvania District Federal Court.

Fine was the key character in a drama at the 1962 national Republican convention that nominated Dwight D. Eisenhower for the presidency. The drama, witnessed by millions on television, was this:

As head of the state's 70-member delegation he was being wooed by political leaders seeking support for their candidates. He wanted Gen. Douglas MacArthur. As the Eisenhower bandwagon gathered steam—and went by the Pennsylvania delegation, Fine ran to the platform and shouted into a microphone, "We had a deal. We had a deal."

He claimed he had an agreement with convention leaders to suspend the roll call so the Pennsylvania delegation could vote for Eisenhower.

Some say that at this moment his political influence was on the wane.

A native of the coal mining village of Alden, he graduated from Nanticoke High School and attended Dickinson Law School. He opened a law office in Nanticoke in 1915.

He became Republican county leader in 1921 and a Luzerne County judge in 1927. It was then he met James Duff, whom he succeeded as governor when Duff went to the U. S. Senate.

Fine was elevated to the State Superior Court in 1947 by Duff and they ran on the same ticket. Duff for senator, Fine for governor, in 1950. Fine defeated Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia.

Fine, during his administration proposed a half per cent income tax but, with opposition from his own party strong, gave up the idea and the state legislature passed a 1 per cent sales tax in 1953.

Haiti Expels Four Priests, Closes Paper

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—The Haitian government, renewing its conflict with the Roman Catholic Church, Tuesday closed a church newspaper, deported the nation's highest ranking church authority, and ordered four other priests expelled.

Police put the Most Rev. Remy Augustin aboard an Argentine-bound plane after holding him under house arrest 14 hours.

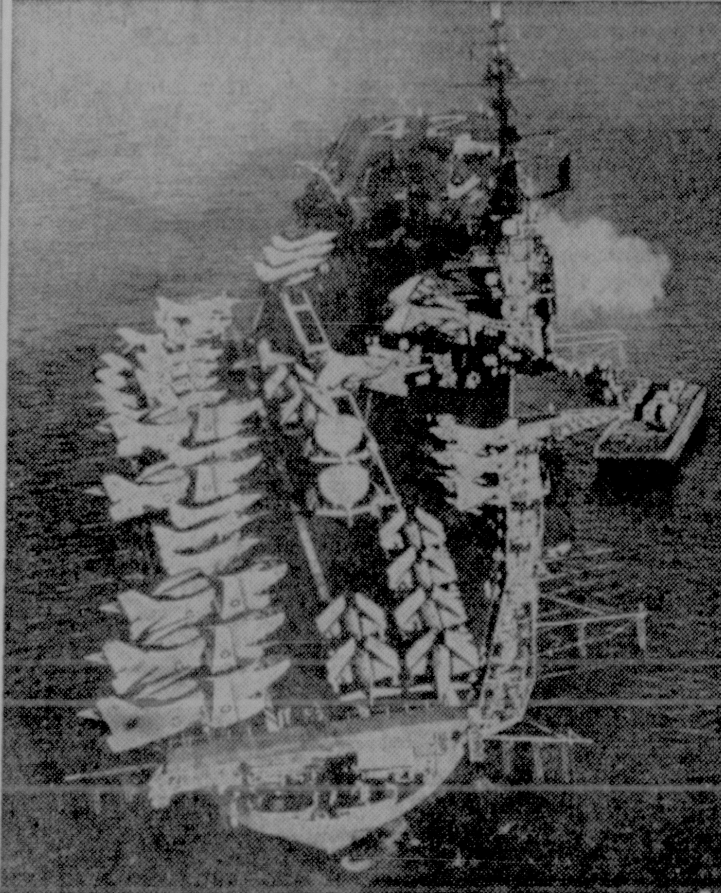

Bishop Augustin, the second prelate to be expelled, had been arrested in bed and was not even allowed to take along a dental plate.

The government later issued a decree for expulsion of four priests rounded up earlier in the day. They are Fathers Paul Belloc, vicar general of the archbishopric; Francois le Nir, its general secretary; Jean Baptiste Betteboure, rector of Saint Martial, Port au Prince's largest Catholic high school; and Emile Callec.

Bishop Augustin, Haitian-born, had been running church affairs in this French-speaking Negro republic since President Francois Duvalier expelled a French-born primate, Archbishop Francois Poirier.

Deportation of the archbishop seven weeks ago drew a sharp official protest from the Vatican and almost certainly exposed the Haitians involved to excommunication. Excommunication means denial of the church sacraments and loss of fellowship with other Catholics.

Duvalier is a Catholic. So are most other Haitians.

Fidel May Claim Army Scared Off Aggressors

HAVANA (AP)—The novelty of watching for an enemy that never comes seemed wearing thin among Cubans Tuesday. There were signs Fidel Castro may soon announce the strength of his people's army has frightened off American aggressors.

Cuban propaganda outlets continued to assert that the United States plans to invade this island nation before President Eisenhower turns over the White House to President-elect John F. Kennedy on Jan. 20.

Castro-controlled papers used big headlines to denounce U.S. Navy maneuvers in the Caribbean and a visit of the supercarrier.

But activity in Cuba's defense preparations, which have placed all Cuba under virtual martial law since Dec. 31, appeared to be dwindling.

Heavy rain and a cold north wind contributed to this.

Cuban labor organizations—in the forefront of the workers militia — arranged for a massive demonstration before the presidential palace Friday night.

It is logical to suppose Castro will address the mass meeting. Many believe he will choose that time to announce that the potential invaders have been scared off by Cuba's massive demonstration of armed strength.

Lawrence Hands Out Farm Awards

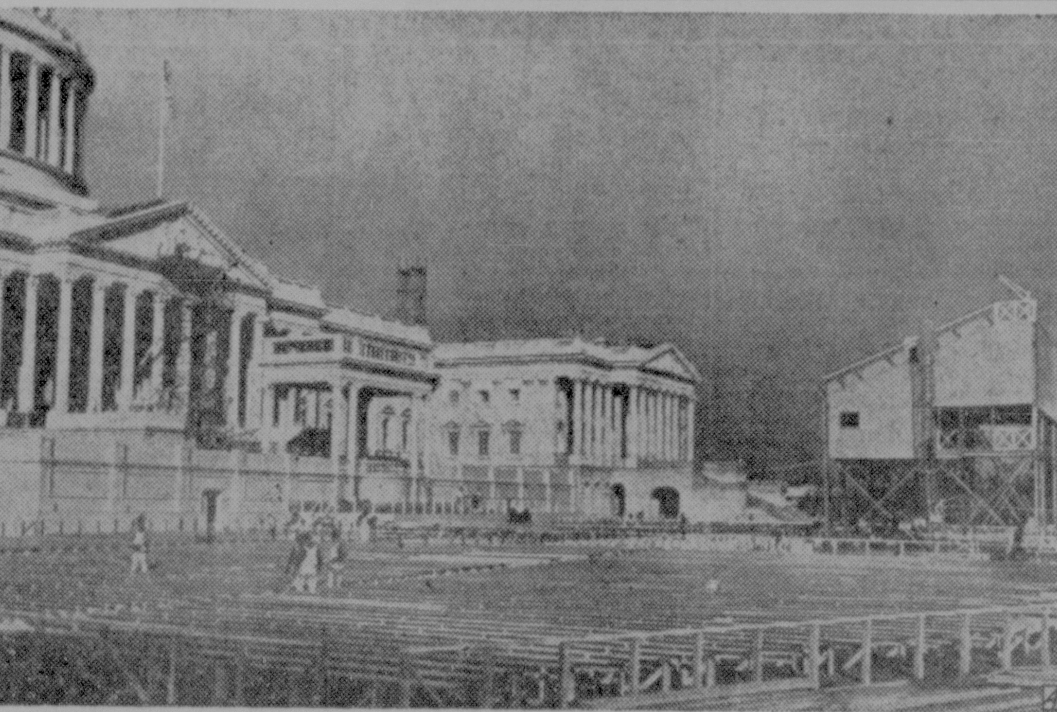

HARRISBURG (AP)—Beaming with satisfaction, Gov. Lawrence handed out 123 farm safety awards at a ceremony in the executive suite Tuesday.

They were distributed among individuals and organizations that have contributed to safety education programs in Pennsylvania during the past year. Most of the recipients were on hand to receive the certificates in person.

The governor has been an ardent advocate of safety, especially on the highways, during his administration.

Dear Abby

You're Unbelievable, Dearie

Dear Abby: I work in a tavern and have met lots of men. The one I love I met here four years ago. He says I am the only girl he's ever loved and if it weren't for his children and his religion he would get divorced and marry me.

His wife is a nagger and doesn't appreciate anything he does for her. He spends almost every night with me. How dumb can she be not to catch on? She keeps having one baby after another just to hold him. How can I get her to give up? Print this, she might take the hint.

STANDING PAT

Dear Standing: How dumb can YOU be? You're not taking the hint yourself. Your boyfriend's wife isn't having all those babies without some help from her husband. Obviously she has no intentions of giving up. Why don't you?

Dear Abby: My wife has needed to go on a diet for years but she kept putting it off. Suddenly she announced that she and a man who works with her are going to have a weight-losing contest. Whoever loses the most weight in six weeks has to take the other one out for a steak dinner. Just the two of them. I trust my wife but I don't like the idea of her going out and having a good time with another man. His wife is all for it because she wants him to lose weight. I'm glad my wife is finally going to diet but I don't like the way she's going about it. Am I making something out of nothing? Or should I go along with it and wish them luck?

JEALOUS HEART

Dear Jealous: It sounds like a good-humored, wholesome contest with a healthy objective. Go along with them and wish them luck — and may the biggest loser win!

Dear Abby: If the general public could see the thousands upon thousands of important letters, expensive greeting cards, announcements of all kind, and priceless snapshots that are being fed into our incinerators every day, they'd soon realize that anything worth mailing is worth a legible return address.

Last Installment Deadline On Federal Tax Incomes

THE DEADLINE for paying the last installment on estimated Federal income tax returns for 1960 is Monday, Jan. 16, R. P. Brownell, Director of Internal Revenue for Scranton District, reminded taxpayers yesterday.

He explained that Jan. 16 is the installment due date this year because Jan. 15 falls on a Sunday.

"If you have previously filed an estimated return, and events occurring in the last quarter of 1960 indicate that your income will be substantially more or less than your original estimate, you should file an amended declaration on Jan. 16," he said.

This declaration, he added, should be marked "amended" and filed with the same District Director of Internal Revenue who received the original declaration. A blank amended declaration is printed on the back of the notice of payment due, which the taxpayer received by mail.

Brownell said an original declaration of estimated tax for the year 1960 should be filed by January 16 on Form 1040ES by taxpayers who first became liable for filing an estimate during the fourth quarter of 1960.

One Exception

Brownell said there is one exception to these rules. If the taxpayer finds it necessary to file an amended declaration on January 16, or if he becomes liable for filing a declaration for the first time on January 16, he need not file or pay on that date if he files his final return for 1960 and pays in full the balance of tax he owes on or before Feb. 1, 1961.

Taxpayers who have questions on this subject may obtain Document No. 5111, "Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax," by calling your local Internal Revenue Service Office, or by writing to "Forms Request," Post Office Box 686, Scranton, Pennsylvania, Brownell said.

"If you have any other questions about your estimate or your Federal income tax return, telephone your local Internal Revenue office at HA 1-8120," he advised.

Monroe YMCA Cited By Council

A TRIBUTE to the work of the Monroe County Young Men's Christian Association developed this week through the award of the 1961-1962-1963 Eligibility Certificate granted by the National Council of YMCAs through the National Physical Education Committee. The certificate is recognition of the Monroe County YMCA's policies, plans and organization in Physical Education and acknowledgment of its excellent accomplishment in this field.

Only those YMCAs holding Eligibility Certificates are permitted under the principles and rules of the National Council of the YMCA to participate in certain types of inter-Association athletic competition. However, the Certificate is an Honor Award, showing that the YMCA adheres to specified high purposes and ideals, and follows standards of performance and the YMCA's objectives.

The certificate is awarded every three years, going only to those Associations which merit and earn it and upon recommendation of the Area/State physical education committee. To receive the Certificate is an indication that the Association meets the qualifications determined by the National Physical Education Committee.

Standards Set Up

The standards set up as applying to the Monroe County YMCA are outlined as follows in a statement which accompanies the Certificate:

1—This Association conducts a balanced and interesting program of physical education.

2—This Association has a physical education committee and volunteer leadership to give guidance in policy and program.

3—This Association has qualified professional leadership.

4—This Association operates under an adequate up-to-date written policy.

5—This Association is a member in good standing of the National Council of YMCAs.

The local YMCA also meets these requirements:

(a) Seeks ways to discover and meet its responsibilities.

(b) Continually inspects, revises, amplifies and modernizes its program in the light of new developments and new necessities.

(c) The Physical Education Committee brings maturity in thinking and judgment to policy and program matters.

While the Eligibility Certificate signifies that the YMCA is now qualified to enter its registered amateur athletes in official sports competition with other YMCAs, the recognition also means that it is performing a recognized service in the community in helping to develop good citizenship based upon Christian principles.

Early Snows Not Harming Small Game

EARLY winter snows caused some Pennsylvanians to become unduly concerned about "starving" small game, particularly ringneck pheasants, according to the Game Commission.

The birds, congregated along plowed-out roads, prompted some observers to believe they were starving and searching for food. Actually the pheasants were picking up grit, small stones and pebbles exposed by the plowing operations.

Against the white background flocks of the birds, with fluffed plumage to further insulate them from the cold, appeared to the untrained observer to be in dire straits, the commission said.

Laboratory and field experiments have shown that ringneck pheasants are well-equipped to fend for themselves. They require supplemental feeding only during periods of extreme stress.

In the current issue of Game News, Harvey A. Roberts, Chief of the Game Commission's Division of Research, said this about feeding game in winter: "Today, wildlife authorities know that most game species possess an almost unbelievable ability to take care of themselves and are capable of finding winter food under most normal weather conditions. It follows then that extensive, well-designed winter feeding programs are justifiable only during prolonged periods of deep-frozen snow, severe ice storms or extremely low temperatures."

Constant Check

During the critical winter period the Game Commission maintains a constant check on the physical condition of the various game species. When the need for help for game birds is indicated the agency provides reasonable amounts of food to qualified individuals and groups for artificial feeding.

The commission makes ear corn available to wild turkeys in many large feeders throughout the mountains. Sportsmen's clubs and individuals too, are allotted commission-bought corn if they have established deer-proof feeders where there is no duplication of the commission effort.

Bobwhite quail are the least hardy game birds. In Pennsylvania, the commission provides reasonable amounts of grain for sportsmen to place, when needed, in established feeding stations where flocks of quail exist. But such feeders must be properly constructed and located near escape cover; otherwise more birds may be lost to predators than are saved by artificial feeding. Cottontail rabbits rarely need man's direct assistance, as they are able to subsist largely on a woody diet of bark and twigs.

HER HERO—Shelley Wismer, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Wismer of Mt. Pocono, exhibits letter she received from Vice President Richard M. Nixon after she wrote him offering sympathy after his defeat by President-elect John F. Kennedy. Autographed picture was also sent her by Nixon. (Staff Photo by MacLeod)

Mt. Pocono Girl, 11, Gets Letter, Photo From Nixon

AN 11-YEAR-OLD Mt. Pocono girl, who consoled Vice President M. Nixon on his loss of the presidency to John F. Kennedy, is the proud possessor of a personal letter from the vice president.

She is Shelley Wismer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Wismer, 525 Main St.

The exchange of correspondence began Nov. 9 with this letter from Shelley to the vice president:

"Dear Mr. Nixon: I am very sorry that you lost the election. I think you are the best man for president because you have had more experience. My mother and father voted for you. If I was 21 I would have voted for you. We held an election in our room at school. You won. Please run again in four years. I am sure my mother and father would vote for you again. Please send me an autographed picture. Thank you. I will be 11 on Dec. 17. I am going to wear my Nixon pins to school every day."

Received Picture

Shelley got her autographed picture and with it this letter, signed by the vice president personally:

"Dear Shelley: I wish to take this opportunity to tell you how much I appreciate your thoughtfulness in writing. I share the pride your parents must have in your expression of interest in the government and its officials. As I have often said, it is always reassuring to a person in public life to see young people so concerned with local, national and international affairs. My wish is that you will continue this interest, for in this way, you are acquiring the knowledge and understanding so necessary in preparing for the responsibilities and obligations of good voting citizenship."

"In view of your kindness in writing, I want you to have the enclosure as a remembrance of the 1960 presidential campaign. Mrs. Nixon joins me in sending our best wishes for the New Year."

Optimism Unjustified

As might have been expected, there is a distinct Soviet flavor to the official line which the Castro government has taken toward President Eisenhower's severance of diplomatic relations with Cuba.

The trouble with U.S. policy, says Havana echoing Moscow, is President Eisenhower. Therefore Castro, like Khrushchev, thinks it will be easier, somehow, to do business with the Kennedy administration than with the Eisenhower administration.

What gives Castro the fallacious notion that Mr. Kennedy would endure Castro's calculated provocations is not clear.

Mr. Eisenhower, whose patience in the face of repeated affronts seemed limitless, was finally impelled to act in national "self respect." And it seems reasonable to assume that national self-respect will be esteemed as much by Mr. Kennedy as it is by Mr. Eisenhower.

Accordingly, if Castro expects the new administration to be more pliant than Mr. Eisenhower's, perhaps he ought to read up on Mr. Kennedy. During the pre-election campaign, the President-elect said Castro should be put on notice that "we do not intend to be pushed around any longer."

Nor, he continued, should Castro be permitted any "expansion of his foothold in our hemisphere," and he spoke of encouraging "liberty-loving anti-Castro forces in Cuba and other lands" to the limit permitted by international law.

Thus Mr. Kennedy's position scarcely justifies Havana's optimism that, in the new Washington, Castro will suddenly become a simple, lovable character who up until now has just been misunderstood.

Of course, Castro will fool nobody. By this time it must be clear to Latin America, if not yet to Castro, that if Cuba's lot is to improve, the improvement will have to come through a change of administration in Havana, not in Washington.

Tourists And Dollars

Talk about dollar outflow—American tourists spent $2.3 billion abroad last year. By comparison, foreign travelers and visitors spent only about one-tenth that amount in this country.

The trouble is that too many would-be tourists in Europe and elsewhere plan to see America last. What's the reason? Traditionally, the New World has held much fascination for the Old World.

This Nation is second to none in scenic beauty, in modern-historic interest, yes, and in cultural offerings, too.

A prime discouraging factor is that the United States, officially and unofficially, just hasn't made any ambitious efforts to attract tourists—and their money.

President Eisenhower's project, the "Visit America Year," has met with lukewarm response from Congress and from private enterprise. Another dampener of tourist enthusiasm is our tedious and sometimes embarrassing visa procedure. Americans don't need visas to travel in most European countries. Why can't the U.S. extend the same courtesy to foreign guests?

The Department of Commerce reports that the average foreign visitor to the United States spends $540 in addition to regular transportation costs.

An imaginative drive by government and the private tourist industry could multiply that kind of money into a major economic boost. And the dividend in international good will is incalculable.

—Harrisburg Patriot

George Sokolsky Says . . .

How To Save Money

The export of dollars is still a problem with us. A professor who teaches in a university wrote to me that I was all right about how dollars are exported.

He wrote that dollars are not actually sent abroad in a package or a suitcase or a black bag but that one goes to a bank in this country and makes the transfer. No dollars really change hands only bookkeeping credits.

A lot this naive professor knows. Imagine a dope importer going to a bank to get a letter of credit or to send a draft or some other commercial document! The FBI, the Secret Service, the Narcotics Bureau would have him in prison in no time.

The import of heroin, cocaine, opium and marijuana is big business, involving hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

The center of this business is in Naples.

Lucky Luciano denies that he has anything to do with it, but it has increased since he has been exported to Italy. To legitimize this kind of money, it is physically sent abroad, as is all tax evasion and tax avoidance money. One would not expect a professor to know about such ugly and miserable mundane doings.

If a real effort were made to go after those who have used tax havens, considerable American dollars could be brought home. Tax havens exist all over the world but Switzerland is the principal tax haven in the world.

Many Americans have money there in numbered accounts. Swiss banks act like fences in this respect. The Swiss refuse to give our government any information on the subject. Their profit on this dirty money is so large that Switzerland protects these tax evaders who are actually thieves.

Perhaps the new administration will pump up enough courage to go after these fellows. Again, the professor is wrong. In these cases, actual dollars are transported abroad because a bank transaction could involve the thief in a felony—even if he put his money in a Swiss bank in New York whose books could be seized for inspection by various agencies.

Another way to keep dollars from going out of the country is to eliminate, as far as possible, the use of so-called civilian experts abroad by the Army.

Men in the army ought to be found who in civilian life can do the work of these experts. Say that an interpreter is needed. Surely, out of our vast military force, interpreters in any language can be found.

As a soldier writes me: "Those of us making a career of the military service expected to make sacrifices and we make plenty of them. We have acquired certain basic fighting skills, and we don't mind devoting a part of our time to maintaining these skills."

"But we have some intelligence, and we're making a professional career for ourselves. This means that we also are technicians and that we cannot spend all of our time (when there is no actual armed conflict) engaged in field exercises with a rifle in our hands. . . .

"When our skills are not utilized as they should be, when highly paid civilians take our jobs away from us, and when public opinion holds that we are fit only for making senseless sacrifices, is it any wonder that we protest? We have intelligence enough to know that all of this is not in the true interest of national defense."

The civilians attached to the Army ought to be hired only if no one in uniform can do their work as well. If we are to have an efficient army in which officers and men re-enlist and make it a life career, there must be no competition between soldier and civilian within the Army. The unnecessary civilians ought to be brought back to the United States.

American tourists do not generally create too much good-will, anyhow. But that is not the point. They export dollars unnecessarily. In the case of tourists, of course, the professor is right.

They buy letters of credit or get travellers' checks and they generally do not carry too many dollars with them. But in the settlement for these letters of credit and travellers' checks, the balance could go against us and the actual settlement might have to be made in gold—probably earmarked gold.

Until the dollar is restored to sound value, it is not necessary to stimulate tourist activities.

The Pennsylvania Story

Farm Bloc Strong

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — The so-called "farm-bloc" in Pennsylvania unquestionably is destined to play an important and perhaps key role in the legislative arena on Capitol Hill this year.

This may seem somewhat paradoxical in view of the fact that it was the "big city" vote—notably Philadelphia—that only two months ago decided which way Pennsylvania would go in the presidential election.

The salient point is that while Philadelphia had the strength to sway the statewide outcome in the overall general election picture—t that very strength shrinks with amazing disproportion on the legislative front!

For example, no matter what the Philadelphia political kingpins may be able to accomplish on the highly variable and fluctuating general vote front, they are still limited to having only eight state senators in the 50-member Senate chamber.

Similarly in the 210-seat House of Representatives, the House membership from the City of Brotherly Love is confined to 39 representatives—or about 67 shy of the 106 House votes needed to insure passage of legislation!

Over the years this factor has remained constant, regardless of the popular vote fluctuations throughout the state as a whole, and for that matter in Philadelphia in particular. Thus the point is that while Philadelphia may have climbed to what is generally considered a "decisive role" in the general election phase, it has not changed on the legislative front.

Regardless of the fact that some "political southsayers" are often prone to pool-pool the big city versus rural tug-of-war, the fact remains that in the past it has been a critical and decisive issue—and threatens to be more so during this 1961 session.

In this upcoming bout, it is the farm bloc within the rural bloc itself that this year may hold the decisive hand.

One of the most influential factors on this front for example is the Pennsylvania State Grange which over the years at one time was exceptionally powerful, then dropped off sharply during the depression and war years, and now once again in recent years is on the upswing.

This farm organization is no scene in the Keystone State, having been organized here back in 1873, just six years after it was founded nationally.

Today it works quietly—and it must be said, judging from comments of lawmakers themselves, most effectively—with legislators both on the home front with local Grange chapters and here on Capitol Hill. Curiously, it neither seeks nor has had the glaring publicity surrounding its activities as have other "publicity-conscious" statewide organizations.

By and large lawmakers readily concede that they lend an ear when State Grange Master J. Collins McSparran and others of the farm bloc have something to say.

The farm bloc quite definitely is not a brush-off in this state, although it may be for some of the big city lawmakers—but who in legislative ranks happen to be in the minority.

Agriculture in actuality is one of the biggest "industries" in the Keystone State—a $3,000,000,000 investment operation—although this fact generally is not realized by most Pennsylvanians. Lawmakers know it however and are guided accordingly.

Coincidentally, the gigantic week-long Farm Show currently under way in Harrisburg is addressed a testimonial to the wide scope and influence of agriculture in Pennsylvania as anything!

Interestingly and of equal importance though, the farm bloc is concerned not with agricultural programs exclusively, but equally with programs that affect them indirectly such as schools, highways—and yes, municipal affairs such as local municipal authorities, whose jurisdiction spreads into farm areas!

The farm bloc in Pennsylvania promises to be one of the key factors in the 1961 legislative session—not volubly perhaps but effectively.

Off The Record

Dear Doctor: Can the belladonna I'm taking for a stomach ailment affect glaucoma and increase the pressure in my eyes?

Dear Mrs. E.: Yes. Belladonna and its close relative atropine both widen the pupils. The surrounding colorful tissue bunches, normally drain fluid from the eye.

High Pressure a Hazard
Belladonna hardly disturbs a normal eye. But when the pressure is already high, belladonna or atropine can send it soaring to new heights.

Doctors keep a sharp lookout for patients who might be harmed by belladonna, but even a doctor's eye is not all-seeing.

Dear Doctor: My question may seem foolish. Why, at 41, is one side of my face all wrinkled while the other side isn't?

The Allen-Scott Report

Ike's Alternate Plan

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — President Eisenhower is going to personally challenge President-elect Kennedy's five-point legislative program.

He will propose to Congress alternative legislation on Kennedy's proposals for medical care for the aged, increasing the minimum wage, aid to depressed areas, housing, and federal aid for school construction.

This militant plan to lay down the gauntlet to Kennedy was revealed by President Eisenhower during a private White House meeting with Republican Congressional leaders.

The President told the GOP legislators that he plans to sound his challenge in his State-of-the-Union message and in a series of follow-up public statements that he will make after leaving office.

Singling out Kennedy's legislative program for his sharpest criticism during his talk, the President declared:

"In recent weeks, we have all heard and read a great deal about the five major legislative proposals that my successor plans to recommend to Congress. I am sure that you gentlemen haven't been taken in by these proposals just because he won the election."

"There is nothing sacred about any of his proposals. In all fields, I plan to offer alternative legislation that I believe is financially sounder and better for the country. We should all fight for these alternatives."

"How do you plan to throw down your gauntlet, Mr. President?" asked Senate minority leader Everett R. Robbins (R., Ill.).

"Will you present your proposals as formal requests to Congress before you leave office?"

"I will make a number of recommendations in my State-of-the-Union and Budget messages but will leave specific details until later," replied the President. "After a brief rest, I plan to return to my Gettysburg farm and begin issuing statements on each of the Kennedy proposals. In these pronouncements, I will spell out my thoughts in full."

"Will we have a chance to discuss these details with you before you speak out?" inquired House Minority Leader Charles Halleck (R., Ind.).

"Certainly you will, Charlie!" retorted the President. "The gate to my farm is wide open to you gentlemen at all times. I expect you to come and discuss these and other proposals with me. If you can't spare the time to travel to the farm, I want you to pick up the phone and call me direct. An extra phone is being installed in my study just for this purpose. As soon as I receive the number, it will be passed on to you gentlemen for your private use."

Post mortem No. 1 — In reviewing his eight years in the White House, the President told the GOP leaders, "I am very proud of my administration's achievements in both the domestic and foreign fields."

"When I came to office in 1953 our nation was at war in Korea; there was a revolution underway in Iran; Quemoy and Matsu were under Communist attack, and a civil war was raging in Indochina," reported the President. "Now, as I prepare to leave office, Iran has a stable government, Quemoy and Matsu are still in the hands of the Chinese Nationalists, and except for a 'little trouble' in Laos there is no fighting in Indochina."

The President then turning to his domestic policies said:

"Here at home our biggest achievement in eight years is the way that we have been able to bring fiscal responsibility back into government. I plan to cap this record by submitting a balanced budget to Congress. Every person in this room should fight for this budget."

Post mortem No. 2 — After the President finished his report Senator Styles Bridges (R., N.H.), chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, questioned him about his record in Vice President Nixon's unsuccessful presidential campaign.

"Mr. President, why weren't you given a more active role in the campaign?" asked Senator Bridges.

"If you want the answer to that question, you will have to ask the Vice President," replied the President. "I have always been a soldier. I waited for my orders, and when they finally came I entered the battle without delay. The call to the front came too late. The battle was lost. At best, I helped to avoid a rout."

"What you say is very interesting in light of my own experience," said Bridges. "I tried unsuccessfully to reach Nixon a month before the election to urge him to have you enter the campaign. I couldn't get my message past his police guard."

With that exchange, the meeting broke up.

From The Realm Of Stamps

By Ray Patton

Although the first postage stamps of Great Britain were made by Rowland Hill in 1840 it is interesting to note that a woman invented the first postage stamps used in Europe, according to the "Philatelic Society of New York."

Back in 1633 during the reign of Louis XIV of France the privilege of placing boxes in the streets of Paris for collecting correspondence was given under the supervision of a private investigator of the King.

The Marchioness Longueville, lady-in-waiting at the court, had often seen this inadequate service and had called for mail where identifications had to be given besides payment of the fee of two sols. This gave her an idea, and speaking to General Fouquet in charge, she said, "Is the control of a letter so important, General?" "No," he replied, "but the two sols is important, Madame."

Art Williams, the affable printer of Stroudsburg who is now basking in the sun in Tucson, Ariz., pens a very interesting note on mayors' problems.

Art notes that the Tucson's chief bigwig feels he has done a wonderful job in 1960 by his ingenuity.

May or Don Hummel feels his success bounces on the action that he "proclaimed" last year only about 43 weeks away. Usually, he feels that you give away 100 weeks—sometimes 200—to National Dairy Week, Hot Dog Week, Long Nose Week and etc.

"Eh, bein, if that is all, that can be easily overcome," and going to her chignon, opened a drawer, took out a piece of colored paper then in use for sealing letters, and said, "Here, you have your postage fee, General." The General was astonished, not understanding what she meant.

"Well," she said, "I will explain it to you. Why not use these colored papers and print the coat of arms of the King on them with the figure '2' and sell these billets to the public? This would do away with the collecting of your fees and give the money in your hands before any service is done. These billets would be printed at the King's printers and sold at the office operated under the Maitre de Requests."

Gen. Fouquet was very much interested in the idea and explained the plan in detail to the King. On Aug. 8, 1653, a decree was issued by the King in which this new system was fully explained and the service started.

The bits of paper used for the franking were called billets and on them were printed the words "Post Paye." These adhesives were the predecessors of our postage stamps.

Social Security Guide

Q. I have a son who is now 32 years old and has been disabled since he was born. I am drawing social security retirement benefits, and wonder if there is any way that payments can be made for my son. My other children contribute most of his support, and when I inquired some time ago about getting benefits for him, I was told that I had to be supporting him before he would be eligible. Has there been any change in this requirement?

A. Yes, there has. In the summer of 1958, the law was changed so that benefits can be paid even if the parent is not providing one-half a disabled child's support. You should contact your social security office immediately.

Q. In 1960 I operated my own farm and made a profit of $1,700. How do I report this income in order to receive credit for social security?

A. You report your self-employment income on Schedule F of your income tax return and forward it to the District Director of Internal Revenue before April 15th of 1961.

Q. What tax return forms should I file if I operate my own farm?

A. Yes, there has. In the summer of 1958, the law was changed so that benefits can be paid even if the parent is not providing one-half a disabled child's support. You should contact your social security office immediately.

Adventists Hear Success Story

MOUNT POCONO—A Trenton, N. J., Church official here yesterday gave his secret to success in getting along with people—get other folks to talk about themselves!

Olen Gilliam addressed more than 250 persons attending the annual publishing convention of the Columbia Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists at High Point Inn. He is secretary of the publishing department of the New Jersey Conference of Adventists.

"Learn to properly communicate with other people," Gilliam advised the church's sales representatives. "Make other people feel important by letting them talk about their life, their work, their families, and their complaints."

He continued his advice: "Listen with eagerness. Ask questions. Keep your part of conversations to a minimum. Thus you will become a good conversationalist!"

"A big bore," he explained, "is a person of small calibre who insistently talks about himself when you want to talk about yourself."

Bogus Money In Scotland

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP)—Banks in Scotland yesterday reported noting a steady trickle of 10-shilling—$1.40—Bank of England notes, bearing a crude stand "Scottish self-government is overdue."

It appeared to be a new campaign by Scot nationalists dissatisfied with ties with Britain.

Oldest County Resident Marking 101st Birthday

By PAT WILLIAMS
Born in Poplar Valley, 101 years ago today, John F. Edinger, of East Stroudsburg, is probably the oldest resident of Monroe County.

John F. Edinger

ten consisting of eight boys and two girls, born to John K. and Hanna Hufford Edinger. Flowers were placed in the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church on Sunday in honor of his birthday anniversary. He is the son of a family of the oldest member of the church. However he has not been able to attend for a few years due to a curtailment of his activities.

Although the strenuous hobby of gardening has been given up, Edinger has retained the sparkle and bounce of his personality. He has become a television fan, and lists "Queen for a Day" as his favorite program.

Many cards and letters have been sent to him on his anniversary to bring best wishes from friends and neighbors.

Walking each day for short jaunts helps to give him a hearty appetite and he puts pork and sauerkraut down as his favorite meal.

An early riser Edinger is up with the "birds." He also enjoys smoking his pipe occasionally, but makes it a rule that he does not smoke before breakfast.

Asked to give his impression of his birthday, he replied with a twinkle, "I don't feel any older."

After working for 37 years at the International Boiler Works, Edinger retired 20 years ago at the age of 81. He is a member of the 25 year club of the International Boiler Works.

He resides with his daughter, Miss Daisy Edinger at 126 Center St. in East Stroudsburg.

Couple Weds At Moscow

In a 4 o'clock ceremony in the Moscow Methodist Church on New Year's Eve, Miss M. Van Brunt, daughter of Mr. William Van Brunt, Moscow, became the bride of Kenneth Treat, of Moscow. Rev. Marvin K. Schell, pastor of the church, officiated before an altar decorated with white poinsettias.

Given in marriage by her brother, Robert G. Van Brunt, the bride wore a white lace dress and a brief veil. She carried a bouquet of white poinsettias and white roses.

Mrs. Harold Ivey was her sister's only attendant. Dale Treat, son of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were nephews of the bride, William and Robert Van Brunt Jr.

A reception for 90 guests was held after the ceremony at the Old Homestead. The couple left for a trip to Florida. They will be at home in Moscow after Jan. 15.

Scout Leaders Meet Thursday For Training

The third session of the basic training course for new Girl Scout leaders will be held at the Scout House Thursday night beginning at 7:30 and ending at 9:30.

Topics to be covered are: How to keep Scout records, how to budget troop money, how to teach games and the use of the patrol system.

Volunteering for the training session as instructors are Mrs. Gilbert Schaff and Mrs. Lillian Acker.

This training system is offered to the new leaders in the Monroe County area.

Webloe Den Takes Hike

Accompanied by their leader, Robert Altomese, the boys of Webloe Den, Cub Pack 86 of the Stroudsburg Methodist Church hiked to the top of the mountain overlooking Glen Brook.

To meet the requirements for their Tenderfoot badges, they practiced fire building. So the fires did not go to waste, hot dogs and marshmallows had been brought along. These were consumed before the boys returned home.

Included in the members on the hike were Carl Decker, Elliott Brown, Kenneth Beidler, John Lindsay, Clifford Berger, William Blevins, Darryl Bayer, Floyd Kellogg and Gary Owens.

It is noted that a planning meeting will be held by the den mothers and committeemen of the pack on Monday, Jan. 16 at 7:30 p. m. at Cubmaster Harry Congdon's home.

Doctor Speaks To Auxiliary

Dr. Klaus Jordan spoke to members of the General Hospital Auxiliary yesterday on the progress made by the hospital. Two guests were present, Mrs. Evangeline Henry and Mrs. Paul Lloyd.

Mrs. Robert Irwin Gives Weaving Demonstration

The AAUW meeting at the Stroud Community House, Monday night was the scene of a demonstration of weaving. This "lost art" has been regaining notice as a hobby in recent years.

Mrs. Wendell Wicks, acting as program chairman invited Mrs. Robert Irwin of East Stroudsburg to present the program. Mrs. Irwin is a senior citizen of the area and devotee of the art of weaving.

She traced the development of weaving down through the centuries from the rough weaving of boughs to form screens for the primitive caves to the present day of mechanization. During the years, the craftsmen of the weaving guilds fought machines. The hand-weaving of material has now become a hobby.

In pantomime, Mrs. Irwin showed the meeting how wool was carded and turned into thread for the hand looms. The old-fashioned spinning wheel was an outgrowth of a hand method of using a distaff bough in the left hand, spinning the wool or flax with the arms, and receiving the thread on a distaff held in the right.

On display were numerous items representing the types of weaving done by hand. Among these were: place-mats, bags, cross-stitch-like pictures, and a five-foot sampler showing the various loom stitches. Two of the articles displayed were an afghan and a stole.

The term "spinsters," Mrs. Irwin pointed out, came from the practice of the unmarried aunt living with a family and doing all the spinning.

Mrs. David Mazer announced the topic for the next meeting will be "Meeting the Need of the Mentally Gifted Child in Our Community."

Three Year Old Shares Honors With Relative

A birthday party was given in honor of Rodney Baker and his aunt, Mrs. Boyer Knecht, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Baker, of Tobyhanna, Jan. 3.

Also attending were Rodney's god-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stanton, of Moscow, and his parents' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hill and Mrs. Catherine Knecht, of Tobyhanna, were unable to attend.

Some cooks like to bake chicken in a moderate oven for about 15 minutes before finishing under the broiler. Choose small birds and have them split.

Miss Stiff Is Bride At Tobyhanna

Tobyhanna — The wedding of Miss Lorraine Stiff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stiff of Tobyhanna and Earl Drummond, son of Mrs. Mabel Vincoe of St. Petersburg, Fla., was solemnized Sunday, Dec. 4 at 2 p. m. at the Tobyhanna Methodist Church.

Rev. Thomas Smiley performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Thomas Smiley was organist and Miss Diane Stiff, sister of the bride as soloist sang "I Love You Truly" and "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of taffeta with a Chantilly lace bodice with stand up collar, trimmed with sequins and long tapered sleeves and having a chapel train of lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations, orchids and streamers.

Mrs. Janet DeDono, sister of the bride was matron of honor. She wore a street length dress of yellow nylon chiffon over taffeta.

Mrs. Jane Rickley of Kunkletown and Mrs. Dorothy Hartman of Mt. Pocono were bridesmaids. They wore street length dresses of lilac nylon lace and chiffon over taffeta and blue nylon chiffon over taffeta respectively.

All wore headpieces of white net with floral trimming and carried cascade bouquets of white carnations and greens with the center carnation matching their dresses.

Alvin Stiff of Tobyhanna, brother of the bride was best man and LeRoy Stout of Pocono and Cloyd Miller of Tobyhanna were ushers.

The church was decorated with bouquets of pom-poms and greens. A reception was held following the ceremony for approximately 100 guests at the Coolbaugh Township Fire Hall.

The bridal table was decorated with streamers and wedding bells and held a four-tier wedding cake which was baked and decorated by the bride's mother.

The bride's mother wore a black and royal blue flowered dress with matching accessories and a corsage of white and red carnations.

When leaving for their wedding trip through the Southern States the bride wore a brown sheath dress with matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

The bride attended Coolbaugh Township School and was employed as a waitress. The groom attended schools in Cincinnati, Ohio, and is employed in a power mower shop in St. Petersburg. At the present time they are making their home at 1644 14th St., St. Petersburg, Fla.

A.B. Wyckoff
STROUDSBURG, PA.

Betty Colvin, our corset buyer, haled me yesterday and said, "Don't you want to come over and take some notes on the specials in my department?" But I was bawky for once. If I continue giving her so much publicity, everyone is going to think I'm on her personal payroll . . . or that I'm getting my own garments free, and that would never do! First thing I'd be investigated for payola, or something. I will say, however, that Betty is having a grand sale on girdles and bras, and all of her customers will enjoy savings on a grand scale when they shop there. Beyond that I'm playing dumb and keeping mum!

Just across the aisle from Betty, Amy Eilenberger must be prodded for items before she'll mention any . . . but she did wish your attention called to her sale of needlepoint pieces, all ready to be worked. The patterns are many, and as colorful as you wish, and the size range, like the price range, is delightfully varied. There are squares of 14, 21, 23, 27, 30, and 33 inch size, as well as decorative pieces 18 x 23, and piano 18 x 45. Regularly this big assortment would retail from 1.19 to 21.00, but sale prices are 89c to 16.50. It might not be amiss to mention that working needle POINT gives PURPOSE to these long, cold, winter evenings when most of us are content to hug the hearth and let the rest of the world go by.

Bea Gorgy is another department head with bright column ideas . . . and when I say bright, I do it happily, for her accessories department just inside our front door is a harbinger of Spring if ever I saw one. Just as a florist's window is irresistible in April and May, so are the counters where she displays some of the prettiest 1.98 blouses I've ever seen . . . flower lovely in their wide variety of colors. My favorite blouse, I think, is of 100% cotton with hi-lo convertible collar, roll-back sleeves, and a silken "make believe monogram" which is actually a bower of Oriental-type flowers in a shade slightly deeper than the blouse itself. The colors are gold (very smart!), mint green, an unusually lovely blue, and a luscious orchid.

The same company has produced several other styles which I also admire . . . but these described above are the cream of the selection, in my opinion. One of the man-tailored styles with notched collar comes in cocoa, a shade of which I am particularly fond. Stop and look at these blouses if you're the type who enjoys casual wear. You'll be delighted to see what a mere 1.98 will do for your wardrobe.

Bea also mentions that these days, when one's home is tightly closed against winter winds, and storm windows are added to prevent drafts, almost every housewife uses air fresheners. We have several by Andre Richard, sold singly at 1.50 or packaged in pairs at 3.00. Particularly popular at this season are Bayberry and the new Jasmine. Cedar rates highest for dresser drawers and closets, and Lavender is a gay perennial.

Big news in handbags this Spring, Bea tells me, will be the elegant combination of tapestry and leather. Stroudsburg's own Vassar bag company has a wonderful line of these bags in natural, pink, orchid, and blue, retailing at 10.50. Bea tells me our selection from Vassar went out in a twinkling at Christmas time, and we have only one orchid bag remaining. It's just what you're looking for, perhaps, if you admire this particular shade and find it becoming.

Another versatile and lovely accessory for any woman is the Chanel coat of black velvet by Top Hat displayed inside our big front door. Neckline and front are banded in heavy grosgrain; sleeves are 3/4; sizes are S, M, and L. What elegance for wear with a slim basic . . . a cocktail dress . . . or a more formal evening gown. And only 8.98.

Trigere Creations Don't Embody New Lines

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
Daily Record Family Fare Editor

New York—For a minute it seemed that Pauline Trigere might be on Tokyo time, fashionwise as well as actually, for the fashion press assembled for National Press Week of the New York Couture Group at the Hotel Pierre.

Pauline Trigere makes headlines not only for the pace-setting fashions she designs but also for those she wears, being the only Couture Group designer to make the Best-Dressed list in her own right. Returning from Tokyo after a long absence from the New York fashion field, her clothes didn't embody any of the things the fashion press had been told to "watch for."

Her necklines were natural not "neck-framing"; her waistlines were normal and definitely marked not "fluid." But Trigere is noted, not for following but for making fashion trends. Her present collection is a case in point. Among the features:

Intersection shaping: wide bands or blocks of fabric in two or many sharply contrasting colors are mitred together to form an intricate and figure-related outline, much as the new form of abstract art, action painting, uses lines which seem casual but which are in reality scrupulously planned. The most startling was a bright red coat revealing one-quarter section in brilliant blue.

Cape effects and little capes to take the place of jackets with a back-fluttering effect. For jet age travel, she featured capes over jackets over dresses in which a woman could peel down from Constellation to conference to cocktails.

Her outstanding sleeve: actually edged inside with a little flexible hoop to draw a new silhouette. She used it on a narrow cape coat and on many silk day dresses.

Sudden bursts of controlled fullness in a collection with the general impression of slenderness, as exemplified in her low-placed flounces.

Stripes: wide Roman-ribbon brilliant stripes; vertical, horizontal or on the bias.

Frechtel Fashions

Harry Frechtel, also just back, from Europe this time, also narrated his own show and did a good job of it. The big fashion news this season, he pointed out, is in the wide selection of fabrics available; the tremendous significance of color which the new fabrics "take" brightly and clearly; the cut which takes advantage of the natural characteristics of the fabrics; and a silhouette dominated by the cardigan and mandarin collar and the fairly broad shoulders.

His own collection effectively proved his point. He manipulated French ribbed jersey or imported ribbed corduroy with bias inserts to emphasize the play of light and shade. He used welted seaming on featherweight silk and wool combinations. He pleated crisp menswear dacon and worsted in an 8-ounce suit.

Not all designers have gone to the frenetic point in color. Branell featured Spring's traditional colors, spiked with white, navy, gray and black. Her emphasis was on the costume theme: matching dress and jacket; three-piece versions with coordinated over-blouses in either prints or solid tones.

Her skirts were noticeably fluid with a new bias-front skirt, with divided skirts which in reality were two sides of a pleated skirt. Special hits were embroidered evening dresses with matching embroidered sweaters.

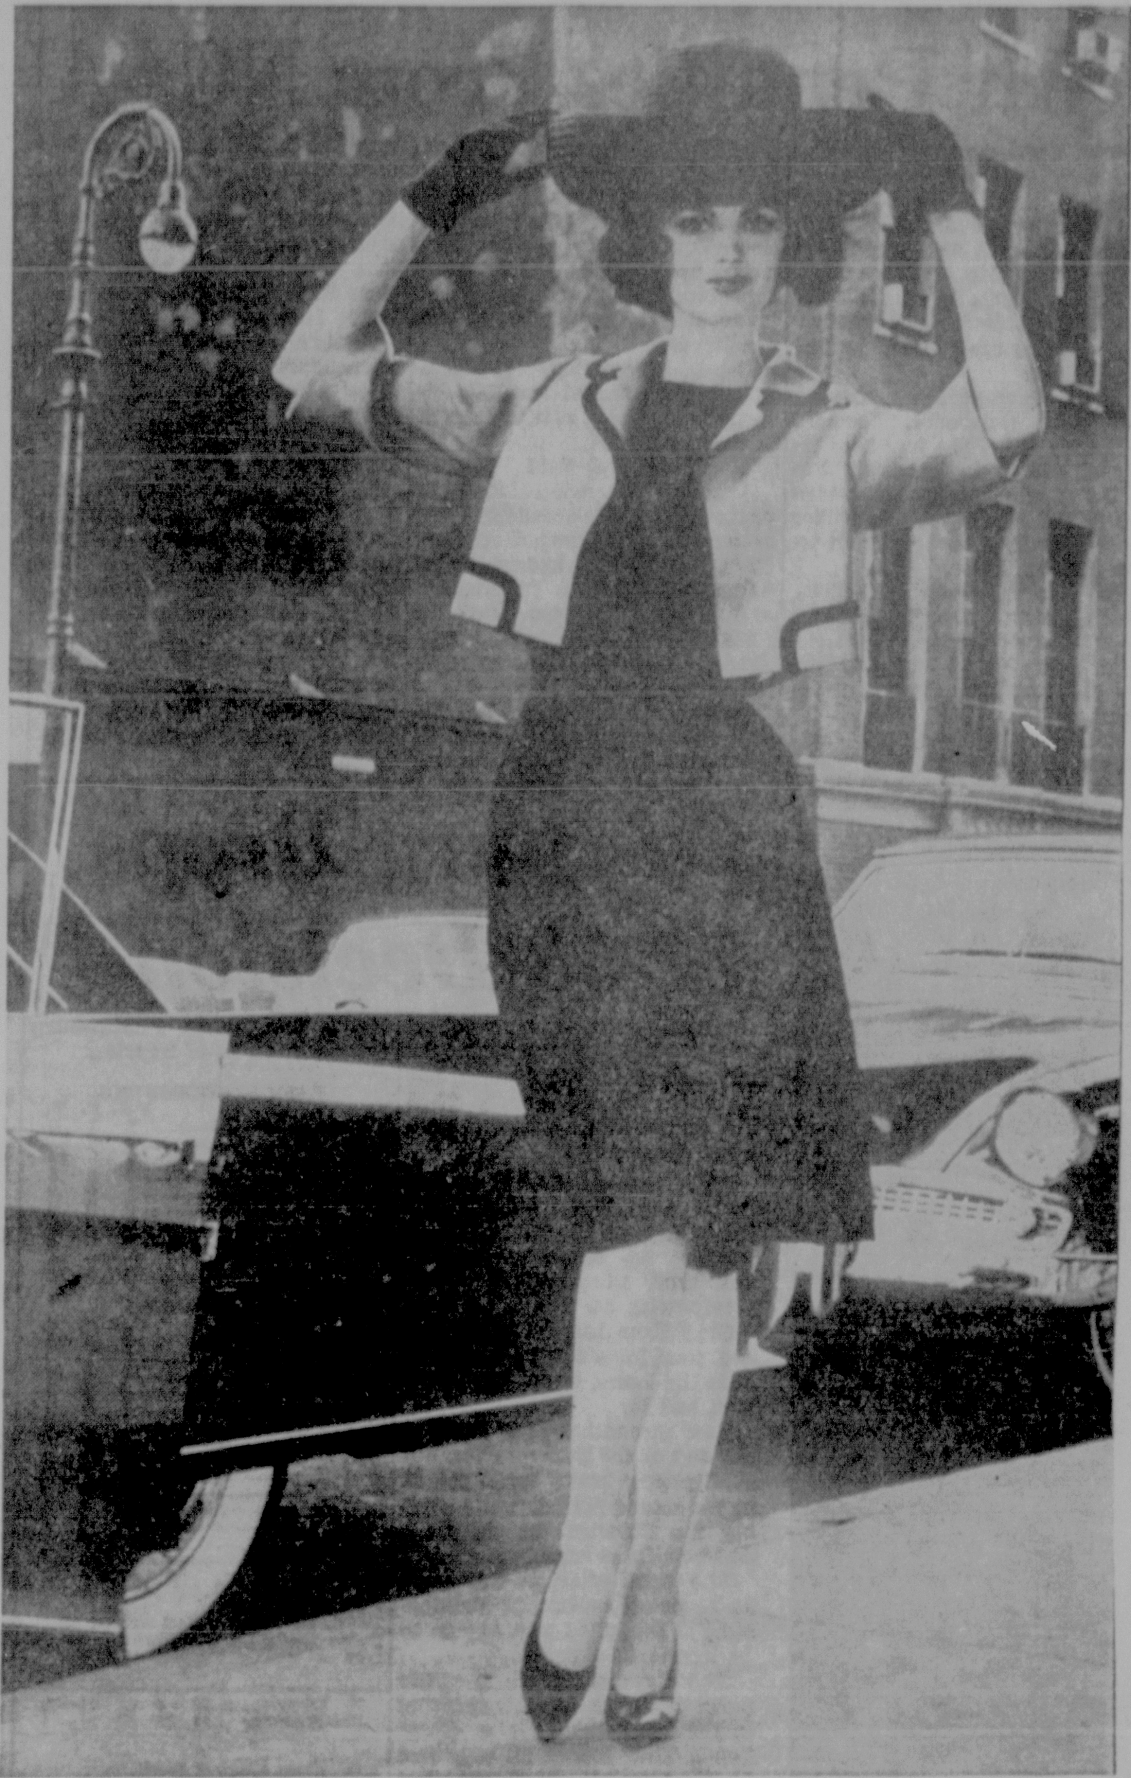

Maurice Rentner opened his show with three outfits designed for Mrs. John Kennedy, which the new future First Lady is even now wearing in Palm Beach: a Resort Green tweed sash coat and skirt with a flax-blue linen overblouse; a short dinner dress with a gold linen top over white chiffon skirt with chiffon cabbage roses at the hemline; and a Chinese red pique dress with a lowered waistline and white belt.

His collection was an illustrated copybook of current fashion trends: bloused tops, over-blouses, pleated skirts, suits and jacket costumes with the jackets in all lengths but all hanging loose in back, never fitted.

Reminiscent of the '30's was his use of bugle-beaded chiffon, georgette, crepe de chine and his shirring, both at neck and hemline.

COSTUME LOOK, so important for Spring 1961, is here demonstrated in a costume of wild rice coloring in handwoven Indian silk from the Harry Frechtel collection. Short-sleeved, three-quarter length coat tops a black leather-sashed sleeveless dress. (Adolfo hat by Emme).

COLOR CONTRAST, another big note in fashions, finds a strawflower tan jacket edged with black wool braid combined with a black worsted box-pleated dress—daytime costume designed by Bill Blass for Maurice Rentner Ltd. Sleeveless dress is wool-braided at the waistline.

FROM THE Pauline Trigere collection is this slim, waistlineless dress of navy Reilina with a matching "capulet" lined with a navy and white mosaic printed silk.

WEDDING RING neckline is a characteristic of many Spring fashions. Here Branell faces it with white pique above a double-breasted bodice, and a slim wrapped skirt of black silk linen.

(New York Couture Group Photos)

CASUAL FIT and casual stance go together. This two-piece dress of sheer wool check with easy fitting overblouse bodice is cut with all-of-a-piece three-quarter sleeves and is cinched in black cire.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

It's doubtful that many readers are staying awake nights, breathlessly awaiting these reports of the latest news of the fashion world, but, nevertheless, your representatives at New York's fashion press week are both sleepless and breathless in your behalf.

At least, they do get involved in some mighty queer experiences, like the one last night to make the malls, New York City, they say, never sleeps, but she sure naps in her pin curls. The Port of Authority Bus Terminal was bright enough, granted, even in the subterranean caverns where you take mail that must be put on buses.

Eighth Ave., however, was dark and filled with the dirty ghosts of wind-blown paper during our eight block walk to the main office of the New York Postoffice. Up its dark stairs, wide enough to march a battalion in full formation, we went feeling small and lost and lonely—sort of like a long shot for some mystery movie.

Inside its echoing corridors, there were shabby, shadowy figures, waiting at vaguely lighted windows for what you imagined might be last-minute-reprieve money orders or messages. It seemed a strange setting at midnight in which to be posting news about chifons and georgettes, bugle beads and soutache embroidery.

In fact, by contrast, the next morning seemed almost cozy, to get back to the perfumed world of fashion — especially with such a headliner as Pauline Trigere so early in the week.

By then it seemed amusing, knowing of her passion for turtles in pins and jewelry of all sizes (even her country home is named "La Turtle") to find it repeated in her "turtle print" used in one of the dresses.

It was somehow reassuring, too, to hear her mention, oh, so lightly, that one of her little coats was so very inexpensive. Well, I suppose $245 is inexpensive by Trigere standards. Another dress in beaded chiffon? Oh, well, under $1,000.

Sort of comforting, too, to be able to notice such trivia as the fact that one model was using one earring in the regular place, her ear, and the other to hold back the band of hair which swept across her forehead to cover the other ear.

Trivia, sure! But you know that's a mighty cold, windy world outside.

North Carolina, Loyola, Arizona Draw 1-Year Penalties From NCAA

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP)—The powerful National Collegiate Athletic Association Council handed out one-year penalties to three institutions Tuesday for violations of rules in connection with recruiting and paying athletes.

The University of North Carolina and Loyola University of New Orleans were put on probation for one year and their basketball teams were barred from competing in the national collegiate championships or any of the tournaments that co-operate with the NCAA enforcement program.

The University of Arizona was placed on probation but no additional sanctions were imposed—a lighter penalty given in recognition of the co-operation of the Arizona administration in the investigation and its elimination of certain illegal practices even before they were reported to the NCAA.

Verbal Slap
North Carolina also received a strong verbal slap for slipshod accounting methods that made it impossible to determine whether more serious rules violations had taken place.

These three penalties, coming just after Oklahoma, Southern California and Tulsa had been removed from probation, brought to 38 the number of cases in which the NCAA has imposed penalties since its enforcement program began in 1952.

The committee on infractions which makes the preliminary investigation of reported rules violations, has looked into a total of 268 cases and has dropped 151 of them.

North Carolina was found guilty of providing excessive entertainment for prospective basketball team. In particular, the council ruled that Coach Frank McGuire and a semi-official talent scout in New York, Harry Goldin, has picked up entertainment bills that appeared too big and had failed to account in detail for the expenditures.

These accounting practices came in for special scrutiny, although they didn't actually figure in the penalty.

Players Paid
Arizona's offenses included the payment of regular monthly sums to a number of football players by a booster club known as the "Tucson Towncat Foundation" and providing transportation for players from the East to take summer jobs prior to enrollment in the university.

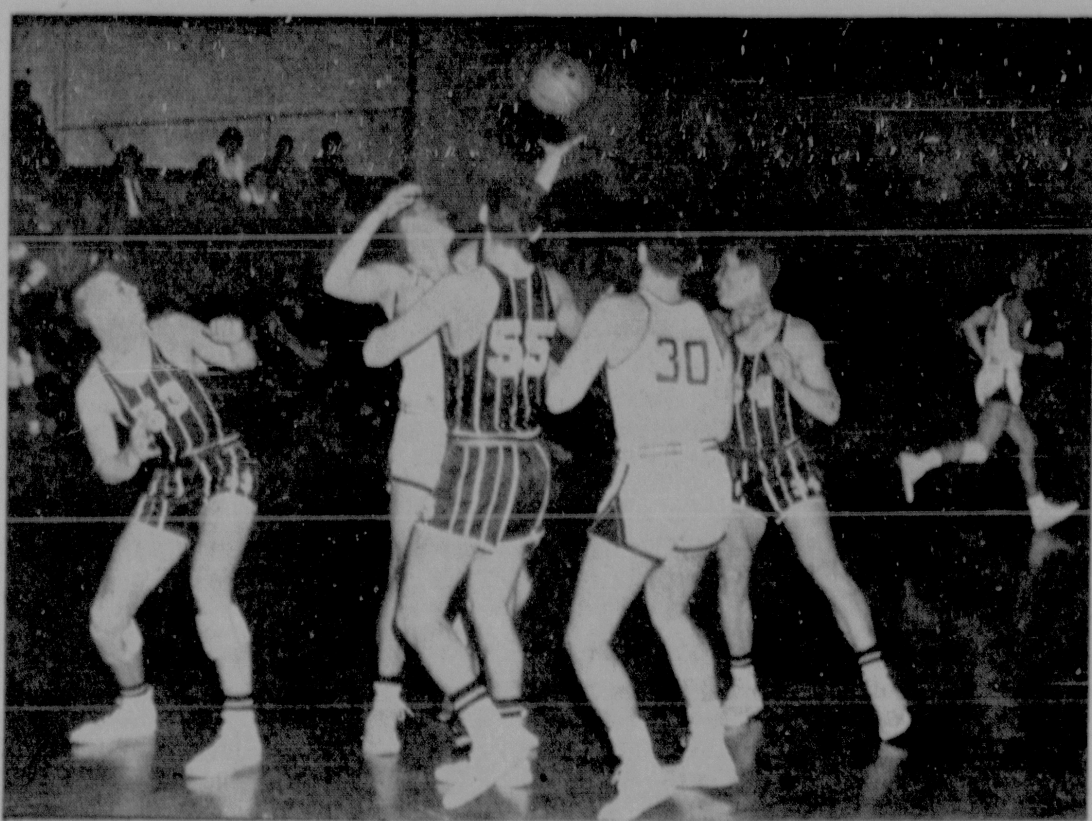

Easing the penalties were the fact that the University itself investigated the cash gifts, ranging from $75 to $150 a month, ended the practice and reported it all to the NCAA and the statement of the university president that two coaches involved in other violations will not be re-employed when their contracts expire this year.

Loyola's violations were giving a scholarship to a basketball player by a process that didn't comply with the rules and then revoking it because he couldn't make the team.

The unnamed athlete was given a scholarship by Hank Kuzma, then assistant athletic director and basketball coach. It was cancelled about a year later by William C. Gardiner, who succeeded him as coach.

NCAA regulations say that scholarships or grants can be awarded only by scholarship committees or other regular academic bodies.

CANDY-STRIPED KIDS—Doug Roth (55) of Whitehall moves in to battle Mike McMahon of Stroud Union in first half of last night's game. Doug Kitson (30) of Stroud Union, closes in to help McMahon. Whitehall won the game 59-44, handing Stroud Union its second league beating.

Whitehall Dumps Mounties 59-44

WHITEHALL High School used a full-court press to overcome an early Stroud Union lead and went on to wallop the Mounties 59-44 at Stroud Union last night in a Lehigh Valley League game.

It was the fifth loss for the Mounties and the second in league play. Whitehall now has a 5-6 overall mark.

The Mounties started out strongly and led through all but the final 32 seconds of the first period. But once Whitehall took the lead, they never let Stroud Union get on the long end on the count again.

Two Steals
It was 14-11, Whitehall, at the end of the first period and 15 seconds later the press paid off with two "stolen" baskets and it was 18-11. The Mounties pulled to within three points seconds before the half but that was as close as they got.

Whitehall kept the press on for almost three periods but the Zephyrs had better success after they discarded it.

The press was junked with Whitehall in front 36-27 and then the Zephyrs really started to roll. They whipped in 11 points in the next two minutes, while Stroud Union collected only six.

John Baylor was the only Mountie who hit with any regularity. Baylor led all scorers with 22 points, collected on 10 field goals and two foul shots.

Perfect Night
Mike McMahon trailed Baylor with 15. McMahon managed only four field goals but he hit on seven for seven from the foul line.

The scrappy Whitehall defense made it hard for the Mounties to work the ball into McMahon. About 90 per cent of the Stroud Union field goals came on long jump shots.

Emery Roman was the high scorer for Whitehall with 16. He stalked the Mounties all over the court and repeatedly stole the ball and broke up Stroud Union scoring opportunities.

Controls Boards
Dave Schwartz, who played only briefly, was next in line with 12 points. The stocky Schwartz retrieved most of the rebounds when he was in the game.

The Mounties stayed fairly close to Whitehall in the third period, as Baylor tossed in eight of the Stroud Union points. It was 39-31, Whitehall heading into the last period but six quick Zephyr points put the game out of reach. The teams matched baskets for the rest of the game.

Whitehall won the junior varsity game 53-35.

Eastburg Drops 77-53 Decision

PHILLIPSBURG High School outplayed East Stroudsburg in only two periods last night, but that was enough for a 77-53 win for the visitors on the Cavaliers' court.

Carl Canfield threw in 13 field goals and four fouls for 30 points to pace the State Liners. Helping the cause were John Eck with 15 points and Jeff Pierly with 14.

Glen Kane had 10 field goals and four fouls for 24 points to pace the losers, while Jack Fellman had 14.

East Stroudsburg led 12-11 at the end of the first quarter, but Phillipsburg broke loose for 21 in the second period, while holding the Cavaliers to six for a 32-18 halftime edge.

The third quarter was even at 21 points each, but Phillipsburg again pulled away by 24 to 14 in the final period.

The Cavaliers with a little more accurate foul shooting might have made it a closer game. They scored on only five of 15 attempts from the free

Sherman To Coach Giants

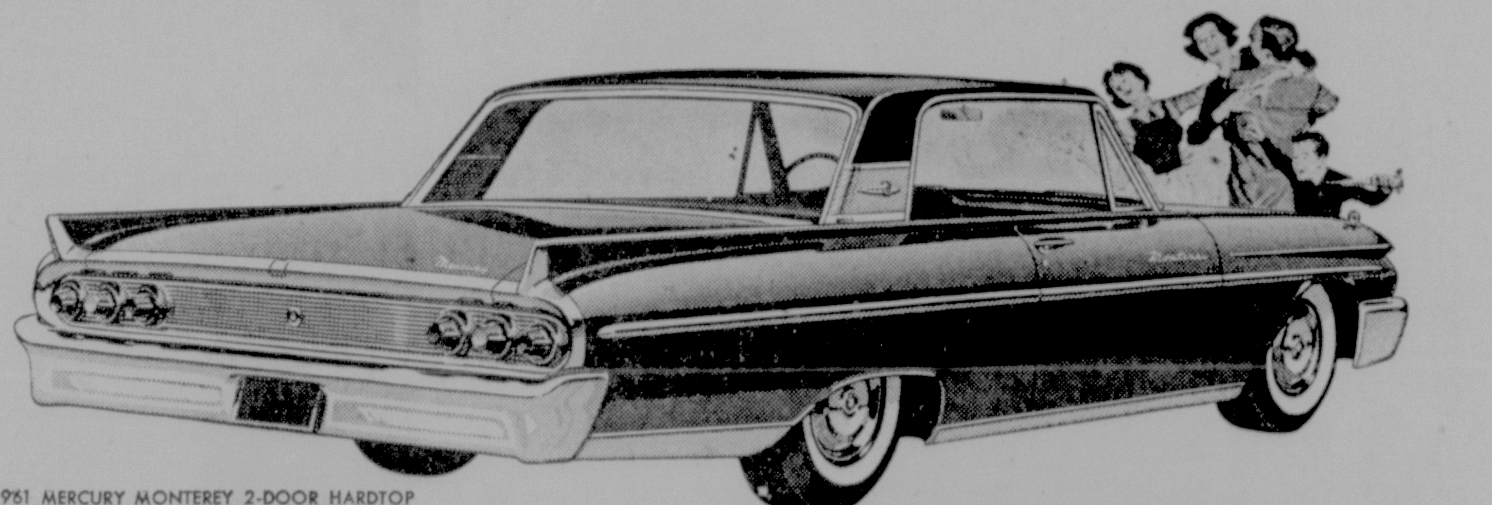

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Giants, turned back by Green Bay's Vince Lombardi, Tuesday hired Allie Sherman as head coach of their National Football League team.

Sherman, an assistant coach under Jim Lee Howell the past two seasons, signed a three-year contract at an undisclosed salary.

"We went after Lombardi right after the close of the 1960 season but he told us his obligations at Green Bay would not permit him to consider the job," said Wellington Mara, the Giants vice-president. "We had a mutual understanding when he went to Green Bay that he would get first crack at the job if it became available. We are certain that Sherman will make a fine head coach."

TRADITIONAL MERCURY COMFORT Only Mercury has Cushion-Link Ride (standard on Monterey and Meteor 800)—a unique suspension system that absorbs jolts and jars that come through to you in other cars. It "gives" backward and forward as well as up and down. And Mercury has a longer wheelbase (120 inches) and greater weight (up to 241 pounds heavier) than other cars in its price range. Result: you enjoy a smooth, solid, steady big-car ride you'd expect to pay much more for. There's plenty of stretch-out room in Mercury, too—even more rear seat hip, shoulder and head room than in last year's spacious Mercury. Wider doors and more trunk space, too.

TRADITIONAL MERCURY VALUE There's extra value in Mercury's engine choice—all the way from the Super-Economy "6" (Mercury's first "6") to the powerful Marauder V-8's. And even the top-performing V-8's deliver up to 15% better gas mileage. There's extra value in Mercury's seven self-servicing features. From self-lubricating chassis to self-adjusting brakes, they save you money every mile you drive. Everywhere you look, the 1961 Mercury offers you traditional Mercury values. Now, for the price most people pay for a new car, you can own a Mercury. Take your pick of Mercury's three great series and drive it today!

Tri-Levels Make Living

TRI-LEVELS make for spacious, convenient living. Here's a plan that exemplifies the best in tri-level planning.

The entrance passage way provides access to all parts of the house. The main level contains the living area with picture windows on each outside wall. Also, a sliding glass door to private terrace.

The activities room features wood paneling and a floor-to-ceiling brick fireplace, dining nook, china cabinets flanking the door.

The living room offers enjoyment of both outside and inside planting and in the passage way a "hall feeling" is eliminated with art shelves on each side of the wrap closet.

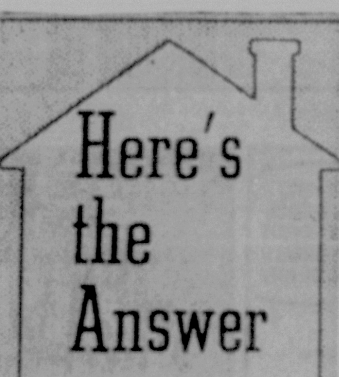

It is only seven steps up to the central hall of the sleeping wing. The two large bedrooms have corner locations with cross-ventilation provided by sliding windows. The third bedroom has excellent wall space and a big closet with sliding doors. A full vanity bath is accessible to all three rooms.

From the ultra modern L-line kitchen, it is only five steps down to the lower level which is strictly utilitarian. It contains a separate laundry room, a lavatory, storage and heater room and a self-closing door to the garage.

This contemporary design of frame and brick construction is a great dollar value and merits careful study.

This plan conforms to general F.H.A., V.A. and Building Code requirements. The plan contains 1,399 square feet, 18,806 cubic feet, and 303 square feet in the garage. Your builder or material supplier can give you the average cost per square or cubic foot in your area.

"Complete Building Plan, including Detail Sheet, Material List and Specification Guide for Design No. H-451 may be purchased for $9.75 for first set; two for $18.25; three for $26.25; or four for $33.75. QUESTION: Every time a faucet leaks in our house, it costs us several dollars to get it fixed. The plumber takes only a few minutes to change the washer. Isn't this something I can do myself? It doesn't seem to require any special tools.

ANSWER: Yes, changing the washer in a faucet is a relatively simple task and, as you say, does not require any special tools. An adjustable wrench and a screw driver usually are all the tools required. The first step is to turn off the water, either at the main supply valve of a branch line. Next, loosen the cap or packing nut just under the faucet handle. Place a piece of tape or cloth between the jaws of the wrench and the sides of the nut to avoid marring the chrome or nickel finish. The nut is turned counterclockwise to loosen. When this has been done, turn the faucet handle as though you were turning on the water. Keep doing this until the spindle can be lifted up and out. At the end of the spindle, you will see a washer, held in place by a small brass screw. The leak in the faucet occurs when this washer gets chewed up or dislodged. Remove the screw, throw away the old washer and put on a new one. Replace the screw and the spindle, tighten the packing nut and turn on the water. That's all there is to it — under ordinary conditions. The trouble occurs, occasionally, when the screw at the end of the spindle will not turn or breaks off. In that case, you will need one other tool — pliers. Use the pliers to turn and remove the screw. Sometimes you have to cut away the old washer so that you can get a grip on the screw with the pliers. When washers have to be replaced too frequently, it usually means that the faucet seat has become rough and needs smoothing. A small, inexpensive tool can be purchased at your hardware dealer for this purpose.

New Emphasis Put On Light; Brightens Up Entire House

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"LET THERE BE light" is the aim of the average home seeker and builder.

But with the greater use of glass in the home, more emphasis must be placed on the decorative aspects of these areas for evening drama as well as daytime charm.

New treatments were given to enormous windows of model apartments in a new building at Kips Bay in New York. Members of the American Institute of Decorators tackled the problem and designed windows so that any degree of light could be had. And when the light was closed off the window treatments enhanced the room decor. Homemakers who look for new ideas for glass expanse or picture windows should avoid either leaving them too bare or treating them too heavily with cornices or fabrics, it would seem.

Ethyl Alper who believes "large windows are treated less heavily today," decorated an apartment for an Italian bachelor, one in the series of international room schemes. The enormous windows are highlighted by a series of arches linked together placed in front of them. The arches go to the ceiling, making the room look larger and giving the illusion of a Roman vista.

The arches were made of compressed wood, about one-half inch wide, covered by Mediterranean blue silk. The large windows are draped handsomely in white silk shantung, over chic window shades.

"When one uses a sheer fabric at the window, shades are important for privacy," says Mrs. Alper who used nubby white linen and cotton shades with a trim of blue pinot-edge ribbon applied with a bond adhesive. The blue matches the arches and the hexagonal vinyl tiles on the floor.

Decorators, too, are emphasizing the importance of thinking of windows as an integral part of the room decor. Mr. and Mrs. C. Eugene Stephenson use three sets of window-screening devices in a living room decorated with a Danish background. They used a white and natural Danish linen in floor to ceiling draperies, low curtains suspended from hand-made walnut rods, and fabric-laminated roller shades.

Stephenson, an expert on lighting in decorations, used illuminated cornices that incorporated a series of ovals, avoiding a heavy effect by day but creating interesting texture and shadow patterns across the living room at night.

Blanket Chest Easy To Build At Home

THEY CALL this a blanket chest but everyone from teenagers to grandparents find it useful for storing everything else. One regular pattern user built it exactly as the pattern specified, installed a dummy tray for linens in the top, then fixed up the lower compartment as a complete bar with glass racks etc. Friends call it a pleasure chest.

The chest is easy and economical to build. The pattern offered below provides full size painting outlines that insure decorating with professional results. Construction from Masonite has been so simplified anyone can build it in very little time.

Measuring 42 inches long, 19 inches wide and standing 26 inches high, the chest provides ample storage space for bulk items. Two drawers at the bottom and a third inside the chest are ideal for small items. Since the chest provides a tight, dust proof cabinet, moth-proofing can easily be added if the chest is to be used for storing sweaters and other woollens.

Khrushchev Spurs Interest For Shelters

AS THE result of Nikita Khrushchev's cold war activities at the United Nations recently, there has been a sharp increase of public interest in basement bomb shelters, reports the Institute of Home Designers.

One manufacturer of shelters says that his inquiries tripled after Khrushchev began his series of talks before the U.N. General Assembly. Home improvement contractors have noted more inquiries from homeowners seeking to protect their families in the event of a shooting war.

For most persons, the institute says, the best protection is the basement. There will be less radio-activity there than in any

New Lavatory Is Economical To Install

ARE YOU trying to find space for an extra lavatory? A good location which is frequently overlooked is the basement.

It is generally easier to install a basement bathroom below the kitchen or another bathroom because you can hook into existing plumbing with a minimum of expense. Basement bathrooms are especially suited for homes which drain into sewers, the institute says, because the soil pipes usually are beneath, or close to, the basement floor.

If your basement has its own access to the outdoors, you can encourage the members of your family to use the facility and thus save wear and tear on the main part of the house. The basement bathroom will be especially convenient for youngsters playing in the recreation room or yard.

other part of the house. To insure that shelter space below grade will be easy to reach, the basement should have a separate outside entrance from the yard. The steps should be covered with an all-steel hatchway.

Half A Day Chore Pays Dividends

A JOB you can do in a half a day but which will pay lasting dividends is the replacement of your old wood hatchway with a modern steel unit.

Time studies have shown that most old wooden hatchways can be removed and replaced in a few hours with an all steel "double-leaf" basement door.

This is a burglar-resistant, weather-tight covering over the steps leading from your basement to the yard. It requires a minimum of maintenance and will last as long as the house.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 11

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Some of yesterday's plans may have to be changed today, but that happens in life. It is good for us. Contain self in argument and discussions without hard feelings.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—Be not encouraged by useless items, debates on non-essentials. Be careful not to hurt those you love, we do it without realizing or meaning it. Some fragile spots. Be sensibly cautious.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—Merrillings, activities may seem more crowded, non-comprehension in part. Study carefully, do not act unless sure; listen to opinions of a variety of heads, going to better aspects.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer)—We are always "found" what we find. We cannot often do well under stress. Many things the more difficult the day, the more we accomplish. No grumbles, smiles!

July 23 to August 22 (Leo)—Separate the necessary from time-wasting, but know not to eliminate life things that bring pleasure and a good but full, generous life and a good but full, honest good things.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—When interrelations interfere, deal with them promptly. Sex matters, if you permit wasted moments, dwelling on sex, not too quick, nor pressure your way through a gracious medium.

September 23 to October 22 (Libra)—Wise compromise does not inhibit allowing the questionable or foolishly hazardous. Be a make room for the thoughtful suggestion, of varied opinions. Shun squabbles.

October 23 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Figures may deceive, but be sure of yours, of all facts. The understandable may seem less so now, but stay with problems in a confident way. Choose wisely that to avoid.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Jupiter indicates taking care of important matters. Stay in your shoes, you consider others, though do not overlook anything that could be important later. Some contrary testimonies.

December 23 to January 20 (Capricorn)—Is-better sort period. Opinions may conflict more than usual. This is at times only the picture, for our ways of expressing things are diverse. Be discreet.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius)—Your planet Uranus position urges you put your talents and ideas to the test. Too often you tend to give in to others' enthusiasm.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces)—Under Neptune's aspect, and considering everyone's aspects, it would be wise to restrain emotions, don't express desires too freely, nor reveal decisions regarding love.

YOU BORN TODAY: Many assets for an interesting, happy life. Indeed, most of you of this sector enjoy life because you are something good in many places, you like to have friends, are ready to indulge activities with little preparation. Naturally outgoing, can change places of abode often, enjoy travel. Curious, but not too sensitive to either; much of one's trouble comes from lack of restraint. Direct your thrust, ambitions and self-reliance tactfully. You are a natural handling money. Birthdate of Alexander Hamilton, early American economist; Eva La Galienne, dramatic actress; Wm. James, philosopher.

'Voice' Not Planning To

Sir Cubans

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite Cuba's drift into the Communist camp and the break in U. S.-Cuban relations, the Voice of America has no plans now to keep America's image before the Cuban people through special broadcasts.

At the same time, an analysis available at the State Department shows the Voice beams only 31 1/2 hours a week to Latin America, less than half in Spanish. There are no such U. S. broadcasts in Portuguese, Brazil's tongue.

By comparison, the Communist-broadcast nations—such as the Soviet Union, Red China and Czechoslovakia—sure bombard Latin America with more than 174 hours of special broadcasts weekly in Spanish, Portuguese and their own languages, apparently intended for Eastern Europeans living there.

The assigned mission of the U. S. Information Agency, which controls the Voice's policy, is to keep this country's image before the world, to interpret U. S. life and culture for foreign peoples.

The USA issued a report on 12 years of Communist broadcasting worldwide, 1948-1959, saying, "Radio propaganda is not popular in Latin America."

Red broadcasts to Latin America, the report said, lag behind those of any other major area. Overall, the USA said Communist propaganda broadcasting increased 300 per cent in that 12-year span, reaching a total of almost 3,000 hours a week in 35 languages. At the same time, U. S. broadcasts rose about 250 per cent, to 565 hours in 36 languages.

Pike Traffic

Shows Increase

HARRISBURG (AP)—Traffic on the Pennsylvania Turnpike's 40-mile system increased by 11 per cent during 1960 but accidents decreased for the best road safety record in its 20-year history.

Turnpike Commission Chairman Joseph J. Lawler said yesterday there were 47 accidents in which 66 persons were killed last year. That compared with 62 accidents and 78 deaths in 1959. He attributed the improved record to "an aggressive safety education and enforcement program."

Leave For Home

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP)—Princess Margaret left for home yesterday after a 10-day private visit with her in-laws in Ireland. The princess and her husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones, will leave Dublin at 3 p.m. aboard an Irish Air Lines jet.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to amuse. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
